

The Conundrum

It was noon. The sun was scorching over me. It's been 5 days ever since I started searching for the treasure of Snefru, 'The Golden Sun'.

I was ordered to find it by Henry VIII of England. As an explorer, I took the task. 'The Sun' is a sphere set on the ground right below the sun. A friend of mine said that risking my life for finding the sun was a bad idea. But he described the sun. The sphere is said to be made out of gold which shines brightly during noon. It's said that on an auspicious day, when earth comes close to the sun, the gold melts to reveal precious stones.

Now I am in the middle of the desert. Tired. I should have quit the task. Suddenly I saw a bright light. When I reached there, I saw the sun! As I went to touch it, it became into clumps of sands. I was fooled. That's when I fainted. As I got my consciousness, I was in an oasis. I did not even thought of how I got here, I knew that I have found the eternal treasure! Water!